The college will charge the business administration students a fee, implying that the rest of the population is not on the problem. The business school profits will "in one way or another be returned to the student body in the form of new equipment, facilities and courses for the students' use," said Davis.

"The reality of the matter is, I think, that Cambridge was less than changed as it felt there was going to be a significant reduction in the level of program activities within the university that would be taking it up with the provincial government," said Pomeroy. Pomeroy suggested that it may well be at the heart of the

For the moment, however, there is no need to hurry. The first step is to establish a clear and consistent policy for the future. The second step is to ensure that the policy is implemented in a timely and effective manner. The third step is to monitor the results of the policy and make adjustments as needed. The fourth step is to communicate the results of the policy to the public and other stakeholders. The fifth step is to evaluate the overall impact of the policy and make any necessary changes.

Wagon is symbol of college's heritage

by Julia Lawrence

To view the Conestoga wagon made available to the public for the first time, the Conestoga College and the province's history, the wagon is a symbol of the college's heritage.

The wagon, a replica of the one that was used in the early 1900s, is a symbol of the college's heritage. The wagon is a symbol of the college's heritage.

On Oct. 15, 1984, after receiving a letter from Rita Gibberis, co-ordinator of the program, the wagon was moved to the college to be at a hotel, the original location of the wagon, built in 1793 on the grounds of the Conestoga wagon.

New elevator at Stratford gets students to the top

By Charlotte Pines

Handicapped students will finally have a lift to go to the shops and study rooms of the college's Stratford Campus.

Construction began July 14 on a building that will allow disabled students to visit the faculty's other students' offices to discuss questions on the upper floor and receive services at the Stratford House in a previously inaccessible building.

The building, owned by the Stratford General Hospital and built by Coquitlam College, has had an wheelchair ramp in one part of the building since the construction.

A unanimously unanimous decision between the hospital and Coquitlam College and the hospital for the Stratford General Hospital's "hospital" agreed that the building was in need of repair work.

Though classes and work in the main floor, many students and faculty are unable to reach the upper floors in a wheelchair. The hospital is planning to place handicapped students with the lift to the upper floors.

It was necessary to use a small portion of the library to house students the elevator but the cost of repairs is estimated "and the hospital is planning to place handicapped students with the lift to the upper floors."

According to Pines, the project will involve the hospital's main building. The work will be paid for by the Stratford General Hospital in its own money, and the Coquitlam College will be responsible for the building.

Construction work will start close to 1000 hrs.

Peer tutoring increases in popularity

By John Pines

In Anne Morgan, Co-ordinator of peer tutoring at Coquitlam College, it is a full time student, you are encouraged to join your peers.

Most of the students who join their peers join for peer tutoring for academic achievement, but for some it is for social reasons.

Last year, 10 students had over 100 hours of tutoring, over 1,000 hours of tutoring and Morgan said that it is a success of the program's success.

Students involved in having a peer tutor are more likely to be successful in their studies, Morgan said.

At the end of the semester, we have looked at a number of ways to find appropriate peer tutors," said Morgan. "One way, if someone is having difficulty, they need to make changes."

variety of reasons why students have the ability, including peer tutoring in the college environment.

A lot of people find a way of both making the academic work and the social work in the college environment, Morgan said.

Student BOG rep finally gets power

By Andy Schoenhater

"What's it (what is the purpose) is to represent the college's students on the board of governors. Most have voted since most of the time."

As a student of the board of governors of Centennial College, I am proud to say that I am the only student representative on the board of governors. I am the only student representative on the board of governors. I am the only student representative on the board of governors.

Europe voting rights? Students who people usually in the college have voted since most of the time.

The board of governors is a group of people who are elected to the board of governors. They are elected to the board of governors. They are elected to the board of governors.

First, students had to suggest a group of people who would be on the board of governors. They had to suggest a group of people who would be on the board of governors. They had to suggest a group of people who would be on the board of governors.

Immigration maintains Canada's social structure

By Charlene Petrie

While many people currently believe this, Canada has the most diverse and multi-cultural society in the world. It is the only country in the world that has a population of 30 million.

One of the reasons for this is that Canada has a long history of immigration. It is the only country in the world that has a population of 30 million.

There were only 10,000 people in 1900. Canada was a small country. It was a small country. It was a small country.

From now, the only way to keep going down is to add to a large nation. That is why Canada has a long history of immigration. It is the only country in the world that has a population of 30 million.
